Messages sent from here to Iola have elicited the fact that he never returned that one of the bodies found vesterday might be that of Budsberg, but a closer inquiry dispels this theory, as the description of Budsberg does not correspond with that of the skeleton of the man found yesterday.

Portions of a black mustache still adhered to the skull which was dug up yesterday while Budsberg wore a sandy mustache. He was also somewhat taller than the man found vesterday. Not Heigelein's Body.

Shunned by Neighbors.

There was an orchard, a truck garden and a meadow. Nothing about the place suggested that it was an abode of mystery and death. Yet because of the previous character of the place it was shunned by the neighbors, and when the great death mystery which it held developed there was no friend of the woman to whom the authorities could turn for information save Itoy Lamphere, former man of all work at the farm, and Joseph Maxson, whose short service had given him no inking of the mysteries which enveloped the place. Lamphere spent the night of April 2 at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Smith a negress, in Laporte.
